

dgCommunities is an online network for knowledge sharing and collaboration among development professionals worldwide. Its communities cover major topic areas with more than 200 partnering organizations to help guide content. Together with its members, they are amassing extensive collections of reports and other information to help us all do a better job in aid and development.

What you'll find. Members and visitors from 190 countries visit the portal to learn, post content, join discussions, and find peers who are working in the field.

- Member directories and profiles
- Searchable content posted by members, guides, partners
- 76,000+ information resources
- Special reports on interdisciplinary issues
- Newsletters, content alerts, RSS feeds

Become a member. Post your professional profile, case studies, research, news, and more. Get up to speed on issues with our quarterly special reports. Receive targeted information by e-mail so you can stay in touch without even logging in.

Become a partner. Take a leadership role as a cooperating organization, guide, or advisor. Connect your information and community of interest with ours!

Become a sponsor. Support the community working in the field that you care about most.

Start a new community. You can also work with us to start a new online community using our online platform and suite of services. With dgCommunities as the starting point, your organization can achieve operational savings, gain instant access to a pre-qualified audience of development professionals, and become part of the larger Development Gateway network. Our platform aggregates and disseminates content, and it includes usage tracking, online marketing, Web hosting, and a survey tool.
